It's how Geelong spends Saturday morning.

To whom it may concern,

I am a co-host of The 2 Blokes Chatting Radio Show on Geelong's 94.7 The Pulse. Our radio program is broadcast weekly across Geelong, the Bellarine Peninsula and Surf Coast regions of Victoria and worldwide via the internet. We have been presenting our program since March 2020 and, before that, I presented my own music program for 12 years.

We regularly receive requests from emerging artists to listen to and to broadcast their music. To be frank, these artists and bands range in quality from great to downright awful but every now and again, one arrives that makes us stand up and take notice.

No PROMISES is one such stand-out.

We stumbled into each other's orbits quite accidentally and were amazed to find out that they were not already signed to a record label. Their song writing and their performance skills are quite distinctive and provide a sound that is unique in a world of musical vanilla. We love the fact that they refuse to define themselves by genre but rather, write and perform music that they love to play.

Another aspect to the relationship we have built with No PROMISES is our commitment to support regional Australia, primarily through our weekly Regional Roundup segment. We love being able to support regional Australians and, in the case of No PROMISES, a part of regional Victoria that we both have connections with.

But with regionality comes a degree of isolation. Fledgling artists and bands in capital cities have a range of venues in which they can perform – cafes, pubs, restaurants, festivals, etc. Being located away from the metropolitan areas introduces both financial and time constraints that mean that there are very limited options for local performances.

We unequivocally support Eric and Janine in their request for financial support to further their musical journey. Financial support means being able to create their next album and then, to take their album and their performances to other parts of the country who haven't had the privilege of hearing – and hearing about – No PROMISES.
